Excerpt: .ordinance, now celebrated its greatest triumphs. It was only an apparent movement in the direction of liberty, if regulations which had become quite impossible were now modified or canceled. The most influential of the rabbins were indeed the least solicit1 us about the maintenance of what was old, ami had no hesitation in introducing numerous and thorough-going innovations; but the conservatives, R. Eliczer ben Hyrcanus and R. Islimael len Elisha were in truth more liberal-minded than the leaders of the party of progress, notably than R. Akiba. Even the Ultramontanes have never hesitated at departures from the usage of the ancient and mcduxval church; and the Pharisaic rabbins were guided in their innovations by liberal principles no more than they. The object of the new determinations was simply to widen the domain of the law in a consistent manner, to bring the individual entirely under the iron rule of system. But the Jewish communities gave willing obedience to the hierarchy of the rabbins; Judaism had to be maintained, cost what it might. That the means employed were well adapted to the purpose of maintaining the Jews as a firmly compacted religious community even after all bonds of nationality had fallen away cannot be doubted. Hut whether the attainment of this purpose by incredible exertion was a real blessing to themselves and the world may very well be disputed. One consequence of the process of intellectual isolation and of the effort to shape everything in accordance...
