Cranmore Publications. Paperback. Book Condition: New. Paperback. 164 pages. Dimensions: 8.4in. x 5.5in. x 0.6in. In this groundbreaking book the author considers the place of the human species within an evolving universe. He contends that the human species is special because it is the pinnacle of the evolutionary process and has a purpose of vital importance. From this perspective he reaches the conclusion that human-induced global warming is in the interests of life. This unique perspective on the environmental crisis will be of interest to anyone who cares about the future of life on Earth. What, if anything, is unique about the human species? Does the human species have a purpose? Is the human species the enemy of non-human life-forms or their saviour? Could human-induced global warming be a good thing? Do individual humans have a purpose? How should humans treat non-human life-forms? What does the future hold for the planet Earth? In this book philosophical and theological themes are sympathetically interwoven with themes relating to the environmental crisis. In the first part of the book the author presents a view of the world in which the human species is special (humans are not just another species of animal). In the second part of the book he urges humanity to take very seriously the danger that we face from global warming. Despite this immense danger he suggests that human-induced global warming is part of what makes the human species special. In the third part of the book the author explains how the issues of individual human purpose, beauty, and our connections to the other life-forms on the planet, are related to the specialness of the human species. He contends that if one shares this vision of the nature of our relationship with the world around us then one is more likely to have a healthy and satisfying life....
