For many of the individual counties in the NWEAI region, the forest products industry is a more significant factor in the local economy than it is in the regional economy (fig. 5). In 1990, the forest products industry accounted for more than 10 percent of total em-ployment in three Washington counties and four Oregon counties. That same year, the industry accounted for between 5 and 10 percent of the total employment in an addi-tional six counties in northern California, nine counties in western Oregon, and six counties in western Washington. The NWEAI and Changing natural resource management policies, the declining timber harvests, and subsequent loss of lumber and wood products employment became issues of national Economic importance by the early 1990s. In April 1993, President Clinton convened the forest Assistance conference in Portland, Oregon, to address ecosystem management and related social and economic issues in the Pacific Northwest (Clinton and Gore...
